Policy for withdrawal from Religious Education

The place of RE in the Catholic school curriculum

Religious Education is the "core of the core curriculum" in a Catholic school (Pope St John Paul II). Placing RE at the core of the curriculum in Catholic schools helps the school to fulfil its mission to educate the whole person in discerning the meaning of their existence, since "Religious Education is concerned not only with intellectual knowledge but also includes emotional and affective learning." (Religious Education Curriculum Directory p4) Furthermore, religiously literate children and young people are able to engage in a fully informed critique of all knowledge, "leading, for example, to an understanding of the relationship between science and religion or history, and between theology, sport and the human body." (Religious Education Curriculum Directory p4)

The outcome of excellent Religious Education is religiously literate and engaged young people who have the knowledge, understanding and skills – appropriate to their age and capacity – to reflect spiritually, and think ethically and theologically, and who are aware of the demands of religious commitment in everyday life (Religious Education Curriculum Directory p6 ).

Religious Education at The Federation of St Joseph's and St Thomas More Roman Catholic Voluntary Aided Primary Schools is at the core of the curriculum. The schools will ensure that parents are fully informed about the RE curriculum and have the opportunity to discuss this with school staff.

The right of withdrawal from RE

It is acknowledged by the governing body that parents are their child's first teachers. The governors take their responsibility of providing good quality Religious Education. They respect that in law parents have the right to ask for their child to be withdrawn partly or fully from Religious Education in order to offer religious education for their child which is not provided by the school. They recognise that the right to withdrawal is a conscience and not a general opt-out request.

Parents do not have to offer a reason for the withdrawal but the request will need to be discussed in order for the school to make arrangements should the parent wish to proceed.

Managing the right of withdrawal from RE

If a parent requests that their child is wholly or partially withdrawn from RE lessons the headteacher will offer to meet the parents to discuss the request and to make the parent fully aware of the content of the RE curriculum. This will include the offer of observing a Religious Education lesson.

The headteacher will explain the options available of the parent either providing work for the child linked to their own religious beliefs or arranging for the child to receive religious education linked to their own belief at another site without impacting adversely on the child's attendance.

For the first option, the headteacher will explain who will supervise the pupil, where that supervision will take place and that the pupil can do work set by the parent to further educate their child in their own religious belief. The work set will be monitored by the person supervising the child's withdrawal to ensure tasks set are completed but that the assessment of such work will be done by the parent.

The headteacher will make it clear that the pupil will not be able to receive instruction in National Curriculum subjects during the time of withdrawal as this time is given over to Religious Education.

If after viewing the RE curriculum and meeting with the headteacher the parent still wishes to remove their child from RE, the headteacher will ask the parent to make a written request for withdrawal.

This written request will be acknowledged in writing with an explanation of the agreed arrangements for that academic year.

A separate request is needed for each academic year and for each individual child within a family.

This policy will be monitored and reviewed every two years.

Equality statement

- The governors and staff are committed to providing the full range of opportunities for all pupils, regardless of gender, disability, ethnicity, social, cultural or religious background. All pupils have access to the curriculum, and the right to a learning environment, which dispels ignorance, prejudice or stereotyping.
- This policy has been impact assessed by governors in order to ensure that it does not have an adverse effect on race, gender or disability equality.

Background and statutory requirements regarding the right of withdrawal

RE forms part of every school's basic curriculum. The basic curriculum can be understood in the following way:

1. Those aspects of education which are the responsibility of the parent and which the school supports through its basic curriculum;
2. Those aspects of education that are the responsibility of the school and which are supported by parents.

The first category above includes RE and Sex Education and the second is the National Curriculum. This distinction places in context the right of parents to withdraw their children from RE and Sex Education but not from the National Curriculum. It also shows why a parent may not withdraw a child from a National Curriculum subject because they are studying a religious topic related to that subject.

If a pupil is withdrawn in whole or in part from RE then the responsibility for what goes on when the pupil is withdrawn and under the supervision of the school lies ultimately with the parents. It is important to understand this in order to be able to understand the options the law gives to parents wishing to withdraw their children from RE and what the school's response may be. Religious Education in the basic curriculum is approved by the Governing Body in Catholic Schools in accordance with the Trust Deed. There is a Bishops' Conference requirement that in a Catholic school Religious Education is taught for 10% of curriculum time.

What the Education Acts say

The 2002 Education Act states that a school will provide RE for all its pupils as part of the basic curriculum, subject to certain provisions:

Section 80 Basic curriculum for every maintained school in England

(1) The curriculum for every maintained school in England shall comprise a basic curriculum which includes-

(a) provision for religious education for all registered pupils at the school (in accordance with such of the provisions of Schedule 19 to the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 (c. 31) as apply in relation to the school),

(b) a curriculum for all registered pupils at the school who have attained the age of three but are not over compulsory school age (known as "the National Curriculum for England"),

It is incumbent on the governing body and headteacher in a Catholic school to ensure that RE is provided in a school, as is made clear in the School Standards and Framework Act 1998:

Section 69. - (1) Subject to section 71, in relation to any community, foundation or voluntary school-

(a) the local education authority and the governing body shall exercise their functions with a view to securing, and

(b) the head teacher shall secure, that religious education is given in accordance with the provision for such education included in the school's basic curriculum by virtue of section 352(1)(a) of the Education Act 1996.

Section 71 (1) restates the right to withdrawal:

71. - (1) If the parent of a pupil at a community, foundation or voluntary school requests that he may be wholly or partly excused-

(a) from receiving religious education given in the school in accordance with the school's basic curriculum,

(b) from attendance at religious worship in the school, or

(c) both from receiving such education and from such attendance, the pupil shall be so excused until the request is withdrawn.

This right can be exercised without need for justification. This is to protect the right of the parent to withdraw their child/children from RE from being eroded. Parents who exercise their right to withdraw their children from RE do have a variety of options.

Section 71 (3) sets these out:

(3) Where in accordance with subsection (1) a pupil has been wholly or partly excused from receiving religious education or from attendance at religious worship and the local education authority are satisfied-

(a) that the parent of the pupil desires him to receive religious education of a kind which is not provided in the school during the periods of time during which he is so excused,

(b) that the pupil cannot with reasonable convenience be sent to another community, foundation or voluntary school where religious education of the kind desired by the parent is provided, and

(c) that arrangements have been made for him to receive religious education of that kind during school hours elsewhere, the pupil may be withdrawn from the school during such periods of time as are reasonably necessary for the purpose of enabling him to receive religious education in accordance with the arrangements.

Subject to Section 71 (4)

(4) A pupil may not be withdrawn from school under subsection (3) unless the local education authority are satisfied that the arrangements there mentioned are such as will not interfere with the attendance of the pupil at school on any day except at the beginning or end of a school session (or, if there is only one, the school session) on that day.

Section 71 (3) makes it clear that parents have a right to have their children religiously educated according to their wishes during the school day and that where reasonable these wishes should be met, but not at cost to the school or the LEA or to the pupil's attendance. If parents are to fully understand their right to withdraw they also need to be fully aware of the options the law allows in their pursuit of religious education for their children.

In summary

- Parents have the right to request that their child is wholly or partly withdrawn from RE.
- The request must be at the instigation of the parent (or young person if aged 18 or over).
- Parents do not have to give a reason for the request.
- A parent may not withdraw a child from a National Curriculum subject because they are studying a religious topic related to that subject.
- Parents have a right to have their children religiously educated according to their wishes during the school day and that where reasonable these wishes should be met, but not at cost to the school or to the pupil's attendance.

Managing the right of withdrawal

The DfCSF Religious Education in English Schools: Non-statutory guidance 2010 contains a section on managing the right of withdrawal.

Schools should ensure that parents who want to withdraw their children from RE are aware of the RE syllabus and that it is relevant to all pupils and respects their own personal beliefs. They should be made aware of its learning objectives and what is covered in the RE curriculum and should be given the opportunity to discuss this, if they wish. The school may also wish to review such a request each year, in discussion with the parents.

However, the right of withdrawal does not extend to other areas of the curriculum when, as may happen on occasion, spontaneous questions on religious matters are raised by pupils or there are issues related to religion that arise in other subjects such as history or citizenship.

The use of the right to withdraw should be at the instigation of parents (or pupils themselves if they are aged 18 or over), and it should be made clear whether it is from the whole of the subject or specific parts of it. No reasons need be given.

Parents have the right to choose whether or not to withdraw their child from RE without influence from the school, although a school should ensure parents or carers are informed of this right and are aware of the educational objectives and content of the RE syllabus. In this way, parents can make an informed decision. Where parents have requested that their child is withdrawn, their right must be respected, and where RE is integrated in the curriculum, the school will need to discuss the arrangements with the parents or carers to explore how the child's withdrawal can be best accommodated. If pupils are withdrawn from RE, schools have a duty to supervise them, though not to provide additional teaching or to incur extra cost. Pupils will usually remain on school premises.

Where a pupil has been withdrawn, the law provides for alternative arrangements to be made for RE of the kind the parent wants the pupil to receive. This RE could be provided at the school in question, or the pupil could be sent to another school where suitable RE is provided if this is reasonably convenient. If neither approach is practicable, outside arrangements can be made to provide the pupil with the kind of RE that the parent wants, and the pupil may be withdrawn from school for a reasonable period of time to allow them to attend this external RE.

Outside arrangements for RE are allowed as long as the LA is satisfied that any interference with the pupil's attendance at school resulting from the withdrawal will affect only the start or end of a school session.

If the school is a secondary school and parents have withdrawn a pupil from RE provided at the school and asked for alternative RE to be provided in accordance with the tenets of a particular religion or denomination, then the LA must either:

- provide facilities for the alternative RE to be given at the school unless there are special circumstances which would make it unreasonable to do so

or

- agree to outside arrangements being made as long as no financial burden falls on the LA or school as a result of these arrangements.

Diocesan guidance

It is important that parents have a good awareness of the objectives and content of the RE curriculum each year. This should be shared with parents at the beginning of each academic year and include information about the study of other faiths and of visits to places of worship. Parents should be given the opportunity to discuss the RE curriculum. In a Catholic school there is a Bishops' Conference requirement that RE is taught for 10% of curriculum time. This equates to two and a half hours per week for Key Stage 2. This is much greater than the RE curriculum time taught in other maintained schools. This difference is not always understood by parents.

Schools should respect the right of the parent for their child to be withdrawn from the RE being offered as part of the school's curriculum in order for the child to receive RE in line with their own beliefs. In light of the parliamentary record that the right to withdraw from RE was given as a conscience clause and not therefore a general opt-out, it is the diocesan position that when pupils are withdrawn from RE and alternative arrangements cannot be made for the type of RE the parents desire then it is the parents who provide materials for their child. These materials will have clear outcomes and will be connected to the faith/philosophy of the parents.

The school should not incur any cost when managing a withdrawal from RE. Therefore the child may need to remain in the same classroom but not engage with the RE lesson as there may not be a suitable place or a member of staff available to provide separate supervision.

The school through discussion with the parent should explore options with the school. These are

- The parent provides RE work for their child linked to their own faith belief to be completed during the RE lesson time. This work should be supervised by a member of school staff but should be marked and assessed by the parent.
- The child goes to another school to receive Religious Education according to their own belief. This should not have any impact on the child's attendance or incur any cost for the school.

If a parent requests to withdraw their child from RE an informal approach is recommended in the first instance.

- Offer for the class teacher and or the Headteacher to meet with the parent to discuss the content of the RE so that they are fully aware of the curriculum and can make an informed choice (although parents do not have to provide a reason for the request).
- Give the parent the option of observing an RE lesson.
- Share the school's policy for withdrawal with the parent. Give a clear explanation of how the withdrawal from RE can be managed. Explain the options that are open to the parent and the responsibilities of the school.

If after the above the parent still wishes to proceed, the following formal approach is recommended.

- Ask the parent to provide the request in writing stating whether the request is full or partial.
- Respond in writing acknowledging the request and explaining how the withdrawal will be managed. This will be informed by the discussion with the parent where options would have been explored.
- The written request will need to be provided for each academic year.

Appendix B: Catholic Education Service guidance on the right of withdrawal from Religious Education and/or collective worship

What the law says

The requirement to provide Religious Education

The local authority, governing body and head teacher of voluntary aided (VA) schools in England and Wales must ensure that religious education is provided as part of the school's basic curriculum<sup>1</sup>.

In VA schools with a religious character, such provision must be in accordance with the provisions of the school's trust deed<sup>2</sup> and instrument of government. In Catholic schools this is therefore "in accordance with the teachings, doctrines, discipline and general and particular norms of the Catholic Church"<sup>3</sup>.

Academies in England are required by their funding agreement and Articles of Association to comply with similar requirements. <sup>4</sup>

The requirement to provide Collective Worship

Pupils in VA schools in England and Wales are required by law to take part in an act of collective worship on each school day<sup>5</sup> which must be in accordance with the provisions of the school's trust deed and instrument of government. In Catholic schools this is therefore "in accordance with the rites, practices, disciplines and liturgical norms of the Catholic Church".<sup>6</sup>

Whilst it is very rare that children in Catholic schools do not fully participate in the religious education curriculum and collective worship of the school<sup>8</sup>, it is possible that the school receives a request that a pupil:

- (i) be withdrawn from religious education and/or collective worship, or
- (ii) receive religious education which is different to that taught at the school.

(i) The right of withdrawal from Religious Education and/or Collective Worship

Parents of pupils in VA schools and voluntary academies are permitted, by law, to request that their child is withdrawn from receiving all or part of religious education<sup>9</sup> and/or collective worship<sup>10</sup> given at the school and any such request shall stand until such time that the parent's request is withdrawn.

Sixth form pupils may, on their own behalf, wholly or partly withdraw from attendance at collective worship at the school<sup>11</sup>.

What happens to the pupil if he/she is withdrawn from Religious Education and/or Collective Worship?

If pupils are withdrawn from religious education and/or collective worship, schools have a duty to supervise them, though not to provide additional teaching or to incur extra costs. Depending on school resources, the withdrawn pupil may be moved to another venue within the school, for example, the library, or, perhaps in a very small school with limited resources, the pupil may remain in the RE classroom but will not participate in the RE lesson. If the pupil is moved to another venue within the school they must be supervised. If a pupil is withdrawn and alternative arrangements cannot be made for the type of RE the parents' desire (see below), for example, due to resources/timetabling etc, it is the parents' responsibility to provide materials for their child which have clear outcomes and are connected to the faith/philosophy/world view of the parents.

A school is able to refuse a request that the pupil study other aspects of the National Curriculum during times they have been withdrawn from RE and/or collective worship as time is already given over to these subjects within the school's basic curriculum. It is important to bear in mind that the parental right to withdraw a child from RE was intended by Parliament to be a 'conscience clause' and not to be used as a general opt-out clause.

Care should be taken not to confuse a request for absence due to religious observance with a request to withdraw a child from RE and/or collective worship.

(ii) Off-site provision of religious education of a kind not provided by the school

What the law says

Where a pupil has been withdrawn from religious education and their parent(s) wants them to receive religious education of a kind which is not provided at the school during the periods of withdrawal, the parent may make alternative arrangements for the pupil to receive religious education of the kind they desire, to take place off the school's premises<sup>12</sup>. Such an arrangement is only permitted where the local authority is satisfied that the alternative arrangements for religious education off the school site will not interfere with their attendance at school. Therefore, absence for this purpose is only permitted at the beginning or end of a school session<sup>13</sup>.

If a child is receiving RE and/or collective worship off-site, then it is the parents' responsibility to supervise their child once they have left the school site. Depending on the particular circumstances it may be necessary for the school to continue to ensure that all safeguarding measures are in place which may include a risk assessment covering supervision, vehicles, DBS, route and timings.

<sup>8</sup> The CES Census Digest 2016 records that 0.02% of pupils in Catholic schools and academies in England were withdrawn from collective worship in 2016.

<sup>13</sup> S.71(4) School Standards and Framework Act 1998. 'School session' means each of the two sessions that make up the school day which is divided by a break. The length of the session, break and school day is determined by the governing body/board of directors of the academy trust company. Therefore, the beginning or end of a school session does not solely relate to the beginning and end of the school day but may also be the end of the session before the break or the beginning of the session after the break.

(iii) Request for Religious Education in accordance with the Local Authority's Agreed Syllabus

What the law says

A parent may request that their child receives religious education in accordance with the local authority's agreed syllabus<sup>14</sup>. Where that child cannot, with reasonable convenience, attend a school at which the local authority's syllabus is in use, the governing body must make arrangements<sup>15</sup> for religious education in accordance with the local authority's syllabus to be given to those pupils at the school<sup>16</sup>.

In all cases, the school would be advised to adopt a procedure that allows for effective communication with parents and pupils where a request to withdraw is being considered or made (see 'Our Advice' below).

Sources of advice and guidance

There are three main sources of advice and guidance.

The first is DfE Circular 1/94<sup>17</sup> issued on 31st January 1994 which relates to schools in England.

The second is Welsh Government Circular 10/94<sup>18</sup> issued in September 1994.

These documents, whilst over twenty years old, remain extant and contain useful examples of questions the school should ask parents to ascertain the reasons for a request to withdraw and what, if anything, can be done to allay any concerns/fears that the parent may have.

The third source of advice and guidance is the Department for Children, Schools and Families (predecessor to the DfE) 'Religious Education in English schools: Non-Statutory Guidance 2010'<sup>19</sup>. This guidance sets out the responsibilities of governors and head teachers and includes a checklist for managing the right of withdrawal as well as case studies.

<sup>14</sup> The RE syllabus adopted by the local authority and taught in schools in the local authority's area, not being schools which are entitled to set their own RE syllabus e.g. VA schools and voluntary academies. Usually the local authority's agreed syllabus requires schools to teach the religious traditions in Great Britain which are, in the main Christian, while taking account of the teaching and practices of the other principal religions represented in Great Britain.

<sup>15</sup> This duty to make arrangements is subject to the fact that the governing body may refuse where it is satisfied that, because of any special circumstances, it would be unreasonable to make the arrangements. In the event that the governing body is unwilling to make the arrangements referred to, they should be made by the local authority in its stead.

Practical Implications

The right to withdraw is specifically linked to religious education and/or collective worship so that care will need to be taken where the school teaches religious education in an integrated form along with other National Curriculum subjects, from which there is no right of withdrawal.

The 2010 guidance provides that “the right of withdrawal does not extend to other areas of the curriculum when, as may happen on occasion, spontaneous questions on religious matters are raised by pupils or there are issues related to religion that arise in other subjects such as history or citizenship”. It also provides that “where religious education is integrated in the curriculum, the school needs to discuss the arrangements with the parents or carers to explore how the child’s withdrawal can be best accommodated”.

In a Catholic school the expectation is that religious education and worship permeates throughout the life of the school and the whole school curriculum. Consequently, the level of integration of religious education and collective worship into the school curriculum is likely to be far greater than in community schools.

What the Catholic Church says about the teaching of Religious Education

It is important to remember that the RE curriculum in Catholic schools, which is set by the Bishops of England and Wales, always requires the teaching of other religions. Catholic schools recognise that parents have the right to seek an education which is in conformity with their own religious commitments and, as far as Catholic education is concerned, these commitments include that of educating young people about other religions as well as about Catholicism. For this reason Catholic schools should always seek to understand the nature of a request to withdraw so that any misunderstandings can be resolved.

Learning about other religions is required both by the Bishops’ Conference of England and Wales, as outlined in the Religious Education Curriculum Directory 2012, and by the magisterium of the Catholic Church.

The Catholic Church views the teaching of other religions as very important for several reasons:

- (i) Learning about the religion and cultures of those who do not share the Catholic faith is one of the ways in which Catholic schools embody the call to love one’s neighbour. As the Church says, “The love for all men and women is necessarily also a love for their culture. Catholic schools are, by their very vocation, intercultural.”<sup>20</sup>
- (ii) It is required by the Bishops, who state that the Catholic nature of our schools entail “a willingness... to try to understand better the religion of one’s neighbours, and to experience something of their religious life and culture.”<sup>21</sup>
- (iii) Many of the children in Catholic schools are practising members of other faiths and so Catholic schools need to be places of hospitality for these children. It is an act of respect and courtesy that a Catholic school’s RE curriculum helps them to reflect on the nature of their own religious identity. As the Church says, “All children and young people [including those of other faiths in our Catholic schools] must have the same possibilities for arriving at the knowledge of their own religion as well as of elements that characterise other religions.”<sup>22</sup>
- (iv) It prepares the pupils in our Catholic schools for life in modern Britain, giving them an understanding of the beliefs of others. This in turn will improve social cohesion and contribute to the common good by increasing mutual respect between those of different religions, thereby contributing to the promotion of fundamental British Values in schools

Our advice

In summary, parents have the absolute right to withdraw their children, in whole or in part, from receiving religious education and they also, as well as sixth-form pupils on their own behalf, have the right to withdraw their children, in whole or in part, from collective worship. There is no requirement to provide reasons, written or otherwise, for making such a request and the request stands until such time that it is explicitly withdrawn by the parent/sixth-form pupil. However, our advice is that, where a request to withdraw is received by a school, the school should speak with the parent to try to understand the basis for the request. To avoid misunderstanding the school should establish the religious issues about which the parent objects to their child being taught (all the while respecting their right to withdraw their child without reasons). Once known, the school should discuss with the parent the practical implications of withdrawal and the circumstances in which it may be reasonable to accommodate their wishes. Practical examples of how a school may reassure a concerned parent considering withdrawing their child may include inviting the parent to observe a RE lesson, time of worship or visiting speaker.

In order to fulfil the Church's mission in teaching religious education, including religions other than Catholicism, the ultimate aim in any discussion to reassure the parent is that they either reconsider making a request to withdraw their child from religious education and/or collective worship, or that they revoke a request which has already been made so that the pupil is able to continue receiving a balanced education which takes into account the major World religions, as well as the Catholic religion of the school.

In a case where the parent still wishes their child to be withdrawn the school must then seek to ensure that there is a clear understanding between the school and the parent about the types of activities from which the child will be withdrawn and those which they will not (because, for example, they are National Curriculum subjects), the type of work the pupil can undertake whilst withdrawn as well as who is responsible for monitoring and assessing how the work has been carried out.

Appendix

You will find below the relevant excerpts of the law as referred to in this Guidance Note.

VOLUNTARY AIDED SCHOOLS IN ENGLAND AND WALES

Requirement to provide Religious Education

Section 69(1) of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 (SSFA) provides:

'Subject to section 71, in relation to any community, foundation or voluntary school –

- (a) the local authority and the governing body shall exercise their functions with a view to securing, and
- (b) the head teacher shall secure, that religious education is given in accordance with the provision for such education included in the school's basic curriculum by virtue of section 80(1)(a) or 101(1)(a) of the Education Act 2002'.

Schedule 19 of the SSFA provides, at paragraph 4 which relates to voluntary aided schools with a religious character:

'The required provision for religious education in the case of pupils at the school is provision for the religious education –

- (a) in accordance with any provisions of the trust deed relating to the school, or
- (b) where provision for that purpose is not made by such a deed, in accordance with the tenets of the religion or religious denomination specified in relation to the school under section 69(4)...

Requirement to provide Collective Worship

Section 70(1) of the SSFA provides:

'Subject to section 71, each pupil in attendance at a community, foundation or voluntary school shall on each school day take part in an act of collective worship'.

Schedule 20 of the SSFA provides, at paragraph 5:

'In the case of...a voluntary school, the required collective worship shall be –

- (a) in accordance with any provisions of the trust deed relating to the school, or
- (b) where –
  - (i) the provision for that purpose is not made by such deed, and
  - (ii) the school has a religious character, in accordance with the tenets and practices of the religion or religious denomination specified in relation to the school under section 69(4).'

Education Act 1996, s.579(1) provides a wide definition of the term 'trust deed' in education law:

"trust deed" includes any instrument (other than an instrument of government) regulating the constitution of the school's governing body or the maintenance, management or conduct of the school

Section 21(4) of the Education Act 2002 obliges governing bodies to comply with their Instrument of Government. The CES Model Instrument of Government for Catholic Schools provides:

2 The School was founded by and is part of the Catholic Church. The School is to be conducted as a Catholic School in accordance with Canon Law and the teachings of the Catholic Church, and in accordance with the Trust Deed of the [name of Diocese or Order] and in particular:

- (a) religious education is to be in accordance with the teachings, doctrines, discipline and general and particular norms of the Catholic Church;
- (b) religious worship is to be in accordance with the rites, practices, discipline and liturgical norms of the Catholic Church

Withdrawal from Religious Education and/or Collective Worship

Section 71 of the SSFA sets out the exceptions to the requirements above.

Section 71 (1) provides:

'If the parent of a pupil at a community, foundation or voluntary school requests that he may be wholly or partly excused from receiving religious education given at the school in accordance with the school's basic curriculum<sup>23</sup>, the pupil shall be so excused until the request is withdrawn'.

Section 71(1A) provides:

'If the parent of any pupil at a community, foundation or voluntary school other than a sixth-form pupil requests that he may be wholly or partly excused from attendance at religious worship at the school, the pupil shall be so excused until the request is withdrawn'.

Section 71(1B) provides:

'If a sixth-form pupil<sup>24</sup> requests that he may be wholly or partly excused from attendance at religious worship at a community, foundation or voluntary school, the pupil shall be so excused'.

Off-site provision of religious education of a kind not provided by the school

Section 71 (3) provides:

'Where in accordance with subsection (1) or (1A) a pupil has been wholly or partly excused from receiving religious education or from attendance at religious worship and the local authority are satisfied -

(c) that the parent of the pupil desires him to receive religious education of a kind which is not provided in the school during the periods of time during which he is so excused,

(d) that the pupil cannot with reasonable convenience be sent to another community, foundation or voluntary school where religious education of the kind desired by the parent is provided, and

(e) that arrangements have been made for him to receive religious education of that kind during school hours elsewhere, the pupil may be withdrawn from the school during such periods of time as are reasonably necessary for the purpose of enabling him to receive religious education in accordance with the arrangements'.

Section 71 (4) limits this so that:

'A pupil may not be withdrawn from school under subsection (3) unless the local authority are satisfied that the arrangements there mentioned are such as will not interfere with the attendance of the pupil at school on any day except at the beginning or end of a school session (or, if there is only one, the school session) on that day'.

Request for provision of religious education in accordance with the local authority's agreed syllabus

Schedule 19, paragraph 4 also sets out the steps the governing body must take where a parent desires their child to receive religious education in accordance with the local authority's syllabus, as opposed to the religious education syllabus of the school designated with a religious character.

'(3) Where the parents of any pupils at the school-

(a) desire them to receive religious education in accordance with any agreed syllabus adopted by the local authority, and

(b) cannot with reasonable convenience cause those pupils to attend a school at which that syllabus is in use, the governing body shall (unless they are satisfied that because of any special circumstances it would be unreasonable to do so) make arrangements for religious education in accordance with that syllabus to be given to those pupils in the school.

(4) Religious education under any such arrangements shall be given during the times set apart for the giving of religious education in the school in accordance with the provision for that purpose included in the school's basic curriculum...

(5) Any arrangements under sub-paragraph (3) shall be made by the governing body, unless the local authority are satisfied that the governing body are unwilling to make them, in which case they shall be made by the authority.

(6) Subject to sub-paragraph (3), the religious education given to pupils at the school shall be under the control of the governing body'.

ACADEMIES IN ENGLAND

The requirements to provide RE and collective worship apply, in similar terms, to academies by virtue of their funding agreement with the Secretary of State, and their Articles of Association.

DfE Model Funding Agreement, May 2016 (numbering as for single academies, with numbering for multiacademy trust companies in square brackets):

2.48. [2.U] The Academy Trust must provide for the teaching of religious education and a daily act of collective worship at the Academy.

2.49. [2.V] The Academy Trust must comply with section 71(1)-(6) and (8) of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 as if the Academy were a community, foundation or voluntary school, and as if references to "religious education" and "religious worship" in that section were references to the religious education and religious worship provided by the Academy in accordance with clause 2.50 [2.W].

2.50. [2.W] Subject to clause 2.49 [2.V], where the academy is designated with a religious character (in accordance with section 124B of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 or further to section 6(8) of the Academies Act 2010):

a) provision must be made for religious education to be given to all pupils at the Academy in accordance with the tenets of the Academy's specified religion or religious denomination. This is subject to paragraph 4 of Schedule 19 to the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, which applies as if the Academy were a voluntary aided school with a religious character;

b) the Academy Trust must comply with section 70(1) of, and Schedule 20 to, the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 as if the Academy were a foundation school with a religious character or a voluntary school, and as if references to "the required collective worship" were references to collective worship in accordance with the tenets and practices of the Academy's specified religion or religious denomination;

Under Company Law, academy trust companies are obliged to conduct themselves in accordance with their Articles of Association. The Model Articles of Association for Catholic Academies (February 2015) provide:

"Trust Deed" includes any instrument (other than the Memorandum and Articles of Association) regulating the constitution of the Company or the maintenance, management or conduct of the [Academy] [Academies], and includes Canon Law and any diocesan directives;

5A.b For any Academy or Academies established under Article 4(a)(i):

(i) Religious education is to be in accordance with the teachings, doctrines, discipline and general and particular norms of the Catholic Church.

(ii) Religious worship is to be in accordance with the rites, practices, discipline and liturgical norms of the Catholic Church.

23 'Religious education given at the school in accordance with the school's basic curriculum' is defined as such education given in accordance with the provisions of the Education Act 2002 in relation to the basic curriculum for every maintained school in England (section 80) and every maintained school in Wales (section 101).

24 'Sixth form pupil' means any pupil who has ceased to be of compulsory school age and is receiving education suitable to the requirements of pupils over compulsory school age (section 71(8) SSFA).
